Good to know

An ECG (electrocardiogram) heart scan is a basic investigation to help diagnose if there are any potential problems with your heart function.

The test is for anyone who experiences:

- Irregular heartbeat.
- Shortness of breath as you exert yourself.
- Significantly high blood pressure.
- Heart palpitations.
- A suspected heart valve problem.

ECG testing is completely safe and pain-free. It involves attaching a number of sticky electrodes or small sensors to the arms, legs and chest area.

Vista Health offer 12 lead, and up to 24hr and up to 48hr ECG (Electrocardiogram) testing:

12 lead ECGs

A 12 lead ECG may take between 10-15 minutes to carry out and involves taking information from 12 different areas of the heart, providing the doctor with a 360-degree view of your heart function.

The graph which is generated by your pulse is then analyzed by an expert to confirm that everything is as it should be and/or report any abnormalities seen.

Up to 24hr and up to 48hr testing

This ECG testing involves monitoring your heart's electrical activity for 24-48 hours, possibly longer.

What happens during the test?

- 3-5 electrodes are placed on your chest.
- You will be required to wear a belt with a small portable recorder which the wires will be attached to.
- All reports returned from a qualified ECG analyser.
